Outreach Clinics offer families a full service opportunity to begin biomedical interventions by providing an on-site physician, an experienced pediatric phlebotomist, and comprehensive biological testing panels at discounted prices. In accordance with the comprehensive approach, a special panel of tests has been specifically designed to detect the most common imbalances associated with nutritional deficiencies, immune issues, digestive disorders, metabolic imbalances, allergies, infectious conditions, and issues associated with oxidative stress. Performing multiple tests increases the chances of identifying all areas likely to contribute to symptoms at hand and knowing the full scope of the patient's metabolic state will assist the physician to better design a treatment plan that is specific to the patient's needs. Restoring balance to all functions of the body produces a synergy that cannot be achieved by addressing abnormalities individually. The physician will address any concerns about the relevance of specific tests.

Rhett Bergeron, M.D., graduated from LSU Medical School, at which time he realized inadequacies of conventional medicine based on drug therapies alone and the realistic possibilities of healing the body with nutritional and metabolic/immune therapies. He began studying metabolic and immunological medicine and applying nutritional therapies to patients with success; however, after recognizing the complexities of many more advanced disease conditions, Dr. Bergeron joined an immunology research lab to studying the immune system in chronic fatigue, fibromyalgia and cancer. In his current practice he integrates nutritional, metabolic, biological and immune therapies with conventional medicine in the treatment of chronic diseases, with an emphasis is on identification of underlying causes of disease, and patient education and responsibility.

Terry Wright, B.S., an enthusiastic Nutritionist with over 17 years experience helping people to better health, including healing his own son Noah of Asthma. Some modalities that he employs include hair-tissue-mineral analysis, iridology, detoxification, Bio-terrain testing, saliva hormone testing, food allergy testing, oat testing, and raw food therapy. Terry has a private practice and is a certified massage therapist and yoga instructor. He has successfully worked with many conditions including allergies, asthma, ADD and ADHD, autism, thyroid problems (hypo and hyper) chronic fatigue, fibromyalgia, heavy metal poisoning, lupus, depression, hormonal imbalance, cancer, arthritis, skin disorders, and cardiac problems.
